

Two Good Farms CSA

November 14, 2017

First Fall Share: This is the first of two deliveries for this fall. The second share delivery will be on December 12th (Dec 13th for BDCH).

Bins for Today! For today's delivery, the contents of your share will be divided between two bins. There's just too much to fit in one bin! When you pick up your share, make sure to take the contents of one yellow bin AND one green bin. If you have any questions, let us know.

Storage: Many of the vegetables in the shares today can be stored longer and used at your convenience. It is important to research the ideal storage conditions for each vegetable. Dry vegetables, like the squash and onions, should be stored in 50-60F with 60-65% humidity, which can usually be achieved in a basement. Moist vegetables, such as potatoes, carrots, and beets, require a bit cooler temps and higher humidity. With a little bit of planning, you can enjoy these vegetables for months to come.

Celeriac: Perhaps the oddest-looking vegetable in this share is the celeriac. It's a knobby, rather ugly looking, root vegetable. However, don't be fooled by its looks! Although celeriac is not as common in the U.S., it is more widely used in Europe. Celeriac's name does hint at a connection to celery, and this is correct. It is a celery variety that has been cultivated over time to produce a large root. Like many of this week's vegetables, celeriac is also an excellent storage vegetable.

We hope you enjoy this weeks' produce!
